As digital transformation accelerates across industries, driven by the rapid adoption of artificial intelligence, cloud computing, and data-intensive services, Indonesia's data center industry is entering a critical phase of strategic development. Data centers are no longer merely enabling infrastructure; they have become a core pillar of digital sovereignty, national resilience, and regional economic competitiveness. Within this, Indonesia has a significant opportunity to position itself as a trusted digital hub in Asia, provided it can effectively balance investment scale, regulatory certainty, operational excellence, and technological innovation.

Under the theme "Transforming Indonesia's Data Center Industry into a Trusted Digital Hub: Balancing CAPEX, OPEX, Policy, and Innovation," the DCTI-CX 2026 conference agenda is designed as a two-day strategic forum that brings together policymakers, data center operators, hyperscale's, technology providers, investors, financial institutions, and industry associations. The agenda addresses the most pressing challenges and opportunities in building a globally competitive data center ecosystem while remaining aligned with Indonesia's local regulatory, energy, and market context.

Day One focuses on macro-level strategy and industry foundations, opening with discussions on Indonesia's positioning in the regional and global data center market. Sessions explore investment dynamics, financing structures, and facility design strategies required to meet rapidly growing demand from AI workloads, fintech, e-commerce, and hyperscale's. Key discussions include the shift from CAPEX-heavy development to OPEX optimization, the adoption of Tier IV and modular facility designs, next-generation cooling and thermal technologies, and operational risk management to ensure uptime, safety, and business continuity.

Day Two shifts the focus toward resilience, sustainability, and long-term readiness, addressing ESG commitments, renewable energy integration, cybersecurity, regulatory compliance, and the geopolitics of data. The agenda examines how operators can ensure power reliability, meet global standards and certifications, and strengthen protection against physical, environmental, and cyber-physical risks. The day concludes with forward-looking discussions on workforce development, emphasizing the importance of building Indonesia's next generation of data center engineers, technical leaders, and operational experts.

Through a curated mix of keynotes and panel discussions, DCTI-CX 2026 serves as a strategic platform to align government vision, industry priorities, and investment strategies. The conference aims to foster actionable collaboration across stakeholders and accelerate Indonesia's transformation into a resilient, efficient, and globally trusted regional data center hub.
